HONGRONG, JULY 15TH, 1875.

Ir is with great satisfaction we record the passing, by the Legislative Council, of the Steam Launch Ordinance. We have already noticed and commented on the provisions of this Ordinance, and little, therefore, remains to be said on the subject .- The insecurity and risk which has attended the navigation of the steam launches owned by Chinese will now be no longer felt. The boilers will in future be subjected to a rigorous inspection every six months, and this will sufficiently provide for the safety of passengers. The Ordinance is, we believe, to come into operation with as little delay as possible, and truly a measure of the sort was never more needed. We trust there will be no attempts made to evade the Government survey, and that if self, and when in full awing pounced on the there are they will prove unsuccessful.

With regard to the point raised at the last meeting, in connection with private launches carrying lights, it seems that such a provision is already in existence, and that a notice to that effect had appeared in the Gazette in 1873. By it all passenger launches are compelled to carry lights None of the speakers, however, men. tioned whether these lights were colouror; not. They should undoubtedly be coloured, as they would then be more readily distinguished by other small eraft. It may well be asked how it is this provision has been so utterly lost sight of. Not only has it fallon into desuctude, but had apparently also fallen out of remembrance. His Excellency the ADMINISTRATOR remarked that he thought Captain Deane's attention should be called to the matter, and the Colonial TREASURER observed that it was unfortunate the rule had not been observed. Very unfortunate indeed. Some one must have been rather lax to have permitted it to be so, incessantly violated. Why or how this unaccountable neglect arose it is not for us to say. But it is certainly not creditable to ment Ordinances are observed. It is little "use framing rules and regulations for shipping in harbour if they are to be quietly laid

THE Hongkong Humane Society is now a society de facto. At the meeting held on Tuesday it was formally constituted, and we trust that it will have a useful career. The meeting was characterised by great unanimity, and a commendable degree of interest was shown in the society by those present. It is to be hoped, however, that the notoriety it will be likely to attain through this means will bring a large accession of members. The agreement that the subscription for effective members should be a merely nominal was a politic move. There are many who cannot afford to pay a large subscription who yet would be very willing to give their services, and at the same there are doubtless a considerable number who would have no objection to subscribe handsomely, but would determined to try and walk first before attempting to run-baye indulged in no am- patronage, and bas given the Archbishop souse. bitious schemes. We are glad to bear from Mr. Rynis that the funds of the Debating Society are to be placed. at the disposal of the infant society, and they will form the nucleus on which to commence. Nothing was said about the funds of the Volunteer Association, and we suppose that they will not be devoted to this excellent purpose. This is to be regret ted, the more so if, as we have been informed, there is a considerable sum remaining, But it is to be hoped that there will not be any lack of money. There ought to be no very moderate sum required. Nor do we beliove there will be. ## Extracts. AFTER THE STORM.

The summer wind with marm rings low Doth softly come and softly go, Lulling the alceny waves, That scarcely rouse themselves to mest The parched sand with kisses sweet, Or carl the sun-browned rock to great That in their coolness laves.

The aunshine laughs upon the deep; And winds and waves no memory keep Of hours of gloom gone by; Though yester eve the storin-winds blow, The waves in form before them flew, And the flerce lightning a flery blue · Flashed from the frowning sky.

The children fearlessly to-day Amidet the shallow waters play, And shout in careless glee; Nor dream that scarce twelve hours have fled Singe shricks of wee and means of dread Mere wrang from lips now cold and dead Beneath the treacherous sca.

Forgotten is the long dark night When sunshine comes with morning light, And hearts grow strong again; On opean's calm marufiled faco The midnight storm has left no trace, But in her depths another place .. Has gathered up her slain,

Could she for one brief hour roved The secrets that those depths conceal, One brief yet awful hour, The supshine would wax pale and dim, The glad soug seems a fundral hymn.... And hearts grow cold, and eyes o'erbrim,

To view the tempest's power-

Flow anfily on, thou mighty deep,

And all thy buried secrets keep Flow on, O tide of human life, Flow o'er the years with passion rife, Estace the tokens of past strife. The soul-wrocks that have been restless heart, to-day drive rest Take nature's lesson to thy breast,

Nor count thy dead hopes o'er; The summer sur is bright and gay The summer wind in gentlest play Crisps the light wavelets of the bay That greet the waiting shore. ISADELLA E. MOSTIMER.

CONFESSION OF FAULTS. The acknowledgment of a fault is often more effectual than any deed of atonement; and confession is speedily tollowed by forgiva ness. Words, which we may call the little second-hands of life, are often of more consequenco than desds, which como round seldom, like the hour-hand. And in the artificial relations of cultivated people avtions can never atone for language.

BUMPTIOUSNESS.

People feel a morbid delight in finding out the skoleton when you pretend to be "somebody in particular;" and thus it always will be. My friend, don't be bumptious don't be "loud"-don't give too much "bush" with your wine-don't be in a hurry to put the coat-of-arms on the carriage unless it was originally on the family barrow-don't patropies other people-don't walk and talk on stilts don't romember the "Admiral" in your family and forget the "unalmirable relatives—don't, if your parents once belonged to a certain "society," ask, with a dove-like innocence, what the tenets of these reople "weally are you know?" -don't, as Ruskin Current Rates. says, "try to be a prodigy." Thus you will escape many an inquiry about the family skeleton.—Cassell's Magazine.

FACES.

How many and how varied are the faces which Nature has imprinted on our fellowcreatures! Often merely an expression keeps an otherwise perfect face from being beautiful; and again, one containing hardly a regular feature has been rendered almost divine by its extremely lovely expression. Beauty consists not only in perfect features, but the disposition, character, and feelings are helping elements. The des are the index of the soul!" There are some faces. we gaze on as we would a beautiful picture, with faultless features and dezzling complexions, but soulless; which fade from our memory when removed from our sight. Warm hearts bearing their heavy burdens behind gilded and costly masks, often pro-ONE OF THE CAUSES OF THE GRA- duce barsh faces; while many a face has been the mask behind which foul play and many dark deeds have been carried on.
